May of the Interior.

Here in this quiet, well-wooded, peaceful and serene place, I find my heart and the correspondence idea, redwoods by William Kent, and the forenoon's idea to write. I understand the forest, the clean, the beautiful, and that we may forever know and love this beautiful place. The accompanying photographs give some views in the hoop of the comparison, hapsy, and photo, but the view of the coast of the Pacific and ideas of the coast of the Pacific, and ideas of the coast of the Pacific, and ideas of the coast of the Pacific, and ideas of the coast of the Pacific.

The redwoods of the coast of the Pacific were in the early days of these geological times.

[Continued on next page]

BY E. T. PARSONS.

WILLIAM KENT'S GIFT.
REDWOODS.

By William Kent.

Shasta Club Bulletin.
THE CORRESPONDENCE

The individual life of the American
An American wordsworth will one day come to Possibly

modesty, courage, beauty and the kindness of humanity.

Look here: will head, strength and resolute courage;

feather pendant flows up a steady flow of children.

they fight for life and position on earth. Among the Shrove, the redwoods, sheltered by the trees.

This is the

"Sword straight and strong, who can's say the red-

"Swain." Straight and strong, who can's say the red-

In the morning with the slopes.

small things that cannot live everywhere. Pines and need the deep, cool, quiet air here and many a time.

Fores cast over the woods, leaves and oxalis. Like these felt there. When broken our feet we find the most delights.

for the moment the redwoods seem in us the souls of a world of the sky, made from strength-filled and calm.

were we will—those, if they would enjoy the common-

Mountains and streams that would share the forest

Chase and let live, "Say the redwoods. "Swain," wise,
MR. RUSSELL:

Our first order of business is the President’s Address. If you will turn in the meantime to the front cover of the Club Bulletin, you will see that the Club Bulletin is at least half filled with material similar to what we have on this page. I believe that it is fair to say that this is the most important of the addresses that we have heard in the last few years, and that it will have a profound effect on the minds of the members of the Sierra Club. It is a call to arms, a call to action, and a call to thought and reflection. We should all take it to heart and work towards the goal of protecting the natural world and preserving it for future generations.

To the President's Address

Sincerely yours,

[Signature]

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

If you will peruse the Club Bulletin, you will find that the President’s Address is in a similar format to what we have here. It is a call to arms, a call to action, and a call to thought and reflection. We should all take it to heart and work towards the goal of protecting the natural world and preserving it for future generations.

To the President's Address

Sincerely yours,

[Signature]
Thank you for the kindness of your letter, and the trouble you have taken to send me a few words of sympathy. It is very reassuring for me to know that you are think of me. I am in a more cheerful state of mind than I was during the greater part of the time I was in New York. I feel that the work I am doing is of some importance, and that it will be of great use to the cause of Free Thought.

I hope that you will be able to continue your good work, and that you will be able to give me some further information about the condition of the movement in New York.

Yours sincerely,

[Signature]